Do you want to know what human rights have to do with Law, History, Theology, Philosophy, Anthropology, Psychology, Sociology, Political/International Relations and Media?

Did you study one of the listed disciplines or did you study something completely different?
Are you an open-minded person with empathy and a wish to better the human rights situation locally and globally?

If yes, you should take a look into our international, interdisciplinary, practice-oriented Master's programme, taught by international experts and under the direction of former UN special rapporteur and current UN independent expert Manfred Nowak.

We aim at providing you with the scientific knowledge and the practical skills to work as a human rights expert. We seek to promote an academic and social environment that in its diversity is integral to the educational purposes of the institution, by engaging in team building exercises, study trips and workshops while cultivating an open culture of communication.

We are looking forward to receiving your application and welcoming you to the human rights family!
